Your SEEK Story Framework

Use this section to build the narrative context for a learning project. SEEK grounds your learner in meaning before asking for effort.

The Story Foundation

16. What is the name of your learning project — course, program, training, coaching relationship, or curriculum?

17. Who is the central character of this story? (The learner themselves, a fictional user, a professional persona, etc.)

18. What challenge or problem does this character face at the beginning? Be specific and vivid.

19. What does the world look like once this character has successfully completed the learning journey?

through additional knowledge of computer systems. As well as navigating through life with a different, better mindset that will allow me to achieve more.

The Narrative Arc

20. Write a 2-3 sentence story opener you could use to begin your course, session, program, or module. Make it personal and specific.

place you can imagine. He was born there, well not really,
he was abandoned as a child and left there by his parents.
There he was taken in and raised. He was fully assimilated with these people and lifestyle. As a man, he decides to venture out.

21. How will you weave this story throughout the material? Describe 2-3 places where the narrative will resurface.

With this certain story, I'm unsure how to integrate it within the narrative. I am still at a loss as to when things will start to amplify, but there is still plenty of weeks left.
